Here is the first paragraph of The Professional Guide to Get the Job of Your Dreams book!

As a prospective employee, you must first and foremost, arm yourself with adequate knowledge about the company that you are applying for. Research is a vital process that would give you the kind of knowledge that will land you that success. Do your research; try to remember and understand the key information regarding the company. This will give you the edge and please your job interviewer because it shows a purposeful attitude. Too many job seekers apply for jobs without any knowledge of the mission and vision of the job companies that they are applying for, likening them to aimless little birds flapping their wings, confused to the direction where they should be going. A prospective employee must always be prepared to answer questions regarding the details of a job and company.

Furthermore, a prospective employee must always have an updated resume or curriculum vitae
