Ebola, here is your guide to understand it, and prevent it!

What is Ebola virus??

More than half of the world lately has heard that there is some flu or virus going around and people who are getting infected are even at risk of losing their lives. The disease is new, requires a lot of concern and it is getting a lot of media play as well because of its near deadly repercussions.

Ebola is sort of an illness that humans are going through. It's a new and a deadly kind of a disease transmitted by animals and humans which shows the signs by fever and internal bleedings and it spreads itself with contact through infected body fluids with the help of Filovirus which we term as Ebola virus. A disease which often results fatal needs to be cured as soon as the victim starts showing any sort of symptoms. The disease is named on the river naming Ebola River, which flows in Congo and where the initial victims, which were infected with this virus, showed up. This virus is said to be intaken by the humans through animals and the close contacts with their blood secretion organs or other bodily fluids which are infected. After getting into the humans, it started spreading human to human in numerous ways i.e. with direct contacts, infected bodily fluids and contaminated sharing in such sort that people doing treatment against this virus used to get infected. The infection stays in the body as long as all the bodily fluids like semen and breast milk contain that virus in them. It has been observed that men who were previously infected by this virus and have now been treated good and well still carry some percentage of the virus and can transfer it through their semen even after 7 long weeks of recovery. That's how strong this virus is and requires a lot to get completely over with the disease.
